PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS

Monday evening Mr. C. H. Edwards was the recipient of an address and a purse of gold, a small token of the esteem and respect in which he is held by his fellow citizens. The event took place at 7.30 o'clock.

Mr. R. G. Travers read the address and made the presentation.

Mr. Edwards in replying said that during his thirteen years stay in Napanee he had had many pleasant acquaintances which would always bear remembrance. Particularly so was this true of his associates and acquaintances in the Curling Club. He almost fancied that some clear, crisp and cold winter's night, if he were to take himself off to Parliament Hill, Ottawa, (his new home) he could almost hear the shouts of the enthusiastic curlers at Napanee. Mr. Edwards also made some reference as to his effort along educational lines during his sojourn in Napanee.

Following is the address :

MR. C. H. EDWARDS,

Napanee, Ont.

Dear Mr. Edwards :

Your friends in Napanee have learned with mingled feelings of sorrow and pleasure, that you are about to leave our town and remove to Ottawa; with sorrow that our school will lose an able and painstaking teacher who has a claim upon the respect and good will of every family in town, whose children have passed through your hands and also with a certain degree of pleasure and satisfaction at your promotion to a wider field of usefulness which will afford greater scope for your ambition as an educationist.

While you will be missed in the social circle and in the sporting associations of the town, particularly the Curling Club, the loss to the cause of Education in Napanee will be great indeed as the success of very many of our young men and women has been largely due to the systematic method of study inculcated by you.

As a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by the friends you leave behind you, we ask you to accept this purse of gold from them with the sincere wish that success will crown your efforts in your new sphere of action and that happiness and prosperity will fall to the lot of yourself and your good family.

Dated at Napanee this 26th day of August, 1912.

Signed on behalf of the citizens committee.

J. B. Allison.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Peck, Amprior, have left for their new home at Vancouver. Last week the members of St. Andrew's congregation tendered them a farewell social. A pleasing programme was rendered, after which the event of the evening took place—the presentation to Mrs. Peck of a cabinet of silver and to Mr. Peck a club bag and a purse of gold.

Hon. R. L. Borden plainly intimated to a large deputation of suffragettes at London, England, that he had no intention of introducing measures for general women's suffrage throughout the Dominion of Canada. The question of franchise, he said, devolved on the nine provincial legislatures. The dominion parliament could not compel votes for women, even if they wanted to. One of the speakers on the delegation said it depended much on what answer Mr. Borden gave as to whether the British suffragettes would not recommend militant tactics by their suffragist sisters in Canada. To this Mr. Borden said courteously, but candidly, that Canadian women were sufficiently intelligent to judge for themselves. No suggestion of methods from cross the seas would in this matter have the slightest influence, in his opinion.

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in thy flight!" Belleville beheld a scene enacted on Moira street which made the old town look like a village again and recalled to aged eyes occurrences of the long ago. The trouble is Belleville has secured a hose reel from Deseronto and the firemen are anxious to become adepts in this way of fighting imaginary village fires. The No. 2 company turned out with the gig about 7 o'clock, the scene of their activities being Moira street west of the upper bridge. A large crowd of citizens congregated and watched the movements of the men. The time made in the run was good and little was lost in the mechanical work of coupling. The men will likely give a good account of themselves on Monday if their practices continue to improve their speed. The work is undoubtedly an excellent practice for firemen in cities equipped as Belleville is with the latest fire fighting apparatus.—Belleville Ontario.

"Accidents will happen." This was again the case on Monday afternoon after three o'clock, when the schooner Keewatin, laden with coal for Swift's from Oswego ran into the corner of Swift's wharf, Kingston, damaging it somewhat. Bnt before the bow struck the landing the bowsprit and rigging of the schooner caught in the roof of the upper deck of the steamer Aletha, which was lying at the north of the wharf, "touching" it up considerably. Quite a strong wind was blowing at the time and the schooner, in charge of Capt. James Dougherty, was making its way down the harbor towards the tower. It appears that the master endeavored, as is his custom, to turn around, so that the schooner could be backed into the slip to be unloaded. The rudder became jammed, and the schooner came in contact with the wharf. A number of people, nearby at the time, said the Aletha was almost lifted out of the water at the stern. About five feet of the bowsprit of the Keewatin was snapped off and the rigging broken. She was afterwards put into the slip, and the Aletha was repaired somewhat before she went up the bay in the evening.

ONTARIO STORM

Stories of Havoc Come Over Province.

Farm Structures Destroyed, Damaged, Stock Killed, Injuries Done by Wind, Every District — Many Have Been Seriously Se

Toronto, Aug. 27.—A series of storms swept across from east to west, starting yesterday morning and continuing late last night. It was on storms that struck Toronto yesterday afternoon, tying up lines and the Toronto electric service, and doing great standing crops and cut grass in adjacent counties.

From nearly every point of view, the stories that have been wrought by one of the electrical disturbances known to the province and one that for fierceness surpassed those remembered by the oldest residents. With the lightning, in many parts, a wind, almost a hurricane, added to the desolation. Many have been set back years.

Galt District Suff

Galt, Aug. 27.—Sunday night storm was most severe many years and although losses have been reported the surrounding country considerably.

Several barns were struck and a couple burned ground. The oldest residents recall such a severe storm vivid and long continued. Among losses reported at Station, canning factory, P. Phrey, well known farmer had several cattle killed by the storm. The barns on the farm of J. Branchton, were destroyed with the season's crop. T. J. Hammill, Sheffield was d. thunderbolt, and the barn White, Wrigley's Corners, and completely destroyed tents. The losses run into partly covered by insurance.

Power Lines Damag

Belleville, Aug. 27.—This the community was on Sunday by a severe electrical storm considerable damage to the Toronto Electric & Water Co. in Thurlow Township, owned by George Bodyley, driven along the road which struck by lightning and killed.

Serious Farm Loss

Brantford, Aug. 27.—Three storms from different directions verged into one here last night and put this district of electric light for over an hour. A box factory of James Elliot and was totally destroyed. Several residences were threatened. Five large barns belonging to George L. Teller, a well-known expert, and Robert Peart, were totally destroyed with the season's crops.

Reford Storm at Ridg

Ridgetown, Aug. 27.—Ridgetown the centre of the worst electrical storm in years Sunday night. Two old two large barns, just built, were struck and built all the contents. Trinity St

The binder twine shortage is a thing of the past, according to Winnipeg dealers, for by the end of the week everything in the shape of orders or deficits in this line will be cleared up.

Floods in England.

London, Aug. 27.—The flood situation in England is becoming increasingly serious. Six inches of rain fell yesterday.

The city of Norwich on the Wensum, 98 miles southeast of London, is almost isolated. The whole train service between London and Norwich and Cromer has been suspended, and many local services are affected. The entire county of Norfolk is a swamp and Lincolnshire, Suffolk and the other eastern counties are in an alarming condition. Everywhere crops are being destroyed by the swollen rivers, and there is no sign of a cessation of the rains.

The condition of the military camps at Aldershot, Salisbury Plain and Swaffham is so serious that many regiments had to be moved. There is a probability of all the summer manoeuvres being abandoned.

Thres Men Escape.

Windsor, Aug. 27.—The three men arrested at Amherstburg early on Saturday morning for looting two drill sheds, which were tied up there, made their escape from the town jail between midnight and 5 a.m. yesterday.

The building in which the lock-up is situated is moss grown and ancient, and there is no one on duty there after noon. The robbers, who are all from the American side of the river, had no difficulty in gaining their freedom. They simply removed the bricks one by one, pried them neatly to one side, and when a hole of sufficient size had been made in the wall, walked out.

Congress at an End.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Sobered by the embarrassments of Saturday's all-night session of filibusters and disagreements, Congress adjusted its differences yesterday, invited President Taft up to the capital once more, and at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon wrote "Finis" after the proceedings of the second session of the 62nd Congress.

The session "just fizzled out," in the Senate. A comparative handful of members occupied their seats and a call for a quorum in either the House or Senate would have forced a return of the embarrassing situation of last week.

Must Help Ships in Distress.

London, Aug. 27.—Failure to go to the relief of vessels in distress is a misdemeanor punishable by two years' imprisonment, according to a notice sent to ship's captains yesterday by the British Board of Trade.

In the circular, which was issued as a sequel to the recommendation of Lord Mersey after the Titanic inquiry, the Board of Trade expresses its confidence that such services will be rendered in the future as in the past in accordance with the best traditions of the Merchant marine.

Detective Burns' Prisoners May Be the Gangsters.

Much Sought After "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood" Are Believed to Be In Custody at Fonda, N.Y.—
 Deputy Sheriff Knows Nothing
 About Arrest — Prisoners Stoutly Deny That They Are the Men.

New York, Aug. 27.—William J.
 Burns — announced shortly after midnight that two of his operatives had arrested two men earlier in the evening in Fonda, N.Y. and that they believed they had at last run to earth
 "Lefty" Louie Rosenzweig and "Gyp the Blood," or Harry Horowitz, the missing gunmen, wanted in this city for their share in the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

The Burns detectives who sent the word into their chief were J. H. Kennedy and T. S. Dorsey, whom he assigned to the trailing of clues in the neighborhood of Albany. They had half a dozen shadowy reasons for believing that the long-sought gunmen were or had been in that part of the state, and last night at nine o'clock they telephoned Mr. Burns that they had made two arrests at Fonda.

The men, whom they had been watching for several days, left Albany yesterday afternoon and headed for Fonda, which is a small town near Johnstown, N.Y., in the southern part of Fulton County. The Burns men kept on their trail and finally came face to face with the men in a Fonda hotel, where they had registered as traveling men. Then they placed them under arrest, and the first move was to make a search of their belongings. One of the detectives reported to his chief that the inspection of the suitcases the men carried had yielded nothing more fruitful than outfits of old clothing, which furnished no clues as to the identity of the men themselves. Both were extremely indignant at the move made by the Burns operatives, and stoutly declared that they were not the men for whom the district attorney had offered a $5,000 reward.

The deputy sheriff of Fulton county, stationed at Fonda, speaking early this morning over the telephone, said that he had made no arrests in the Rosenthal case, and that he knew of no such arrests having been made.
 He added, however, that he did not know anything about the business of the Burns operatives or of their presence in Fonda. Kennedy and Dorsey reported to Mr. Burns that the men they had been trailing answered in many respects to the descriptions of "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louis."

TORONTO FAIR OPENS.

The Duke of Connaught Officiates at the Ceremony.

Toronto, Aug. 27.—It was a great gathering in the amphitheatre of the Dairy Building at half-past two o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by the Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, performed the opening ceremony. The interior of the building was tastefully decorated with festoons of green, white and yellow muslin, contrasting strikingly with other draperies of white and purple.

As the royal party entered the building the Scots Guards Band, which had pleasantly whiled away the period of waiting with the charm of their music, struck up the National Anthem. This was followed by an lowing telegram from Earl Grey:

 Rhodesia, South Africa.

"May this year's Exhibition far eclipse all former records and be worthy of the presence of the Duke of Connaught and cadets of the Empire."

After the duke's reply to the President's address, the band played "God Save the King," and the Canadian National Exhibition for 1912 was formally set in motion.

Three ringing cheers were raised for the Duke and Duchess as they left the building, and another was added for the princess, who gracefully bowed her acknowledgements.

The party left the grounds immediately to attend the R.C.Y.C. garden party.

Korean Plotters.

Seoul, Korea, Aug. 27.—Japanese and Korean lawyers yesterday pleaded for leniency towards the prisoners charged with conspiring against the life of Count Terauchi, Governor-General of Korea. The trial, in which 123 Kore-ans are accused, was resumed yesterday morning, when speeches for the defence were made.

The addresses for the prosecution were concluded on Saturday, when the crown prosecutor called on the court to sentence Baron Yunchiho and five other alleged leaders of the Sin-minhoi secret society to ten years' imprisonment. He also demanded sentences of from five to eight years for the other 117 accused.

Escaped From Reformatory.

Winnipeg, Aug. 27.—After escaping from the Reformatory at Portage la Prairie late Sunday night, Arthur Mc-Cullachy and Alex. Wilson, two Winnipeg lads, sent up there for stealing motors, took an axe and broke open four garages in succession.

In the garage of Crown Prosecutor Taylor they found a machine to suit them. They were caught at Deer Lodge on the outskirts of the city early yesterday afternoon.

A WOMAN'S GOOD LOOKS

Depend on her general health and freedom from pain. Many a woman looks old before her time because of those irregularities which are essentially feminine. Starting from early womanhood, she suffers from frequently recurring derangements that upset her womanly health. If she be beautiful she grows into that mellow age without wrinkles and crowfoot about the eyes or the blue circles underneath. It is invariably the rule that such women suffer little, or not at all, from womanly derangements which sap the health and leave in the face the tell-tale story of pain and suffering. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the famous specialist in the diseases of women, found a prescription in his early practice that soothed the organism peculiar to womanhood—oiled the machinery, as it were, of the human system—and helped the woman to pass those painful periods that scar-lined and aged her face. This remedy became the well-known Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that has benefited thousands of women and saved them from misery and suffering at different periods in life.

MRS. HARKLEY E. PIERCE, of 244 Bright Street, Sarnia, Ont., writes: "I am now a well woman after suffering for three years and doctoring with several different doctors, each one saying it was something different, and the last one, after putting me through a thorough examination, said I was suffering from a growth, which, in time, would result in cancer, and said I would not live more than two years if not operated upon right away. I became hopelessly discouraged but would not consent to the operation as I was too weak and too much afraid, but at last, through the advice of a friend, I tried Dr. Pierce's medicines, and after using two bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I immediately felt a change. I also used two boxes of 'Healing Suppositories' and eight boxes of 'Lotion Tablets,' and can safely praise the name of Dr. Pierce's medicines to all who suffer from any female disease, for these medicines are all they are claimed to be, and I hope will help others as they have helped me."

NO TEST FOR MONTHS

Canal Case Cannot Be Decided For Some Time.

Washington Officials Are of the Opinion That the Legality of the Rebates to American Ships Cannot Be Tested Until the Canal Has Been Opened—Taft Willing to Try the Issue.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Although Mr. Innes, the British charge and counsellor of the embassy, who was recalled from his vacation on the Maine coast to carry out certain directions of his Government regarding the Panama Canal legislation, remains in Washington, he has made no sign of a purpose to present any fresh representations to the State Department on this subject.

The original British protest having been ineffective in preventing the enactment of the objectionable legislation, and there being now a year and a half to elapse before the question of the actual payment of tolls in the canal can become a practical one, there does not seem to be special reason for urgency in negotiations.

Although President Taft was not himself convinced of the soundness of the assertion that foreign ship owners already have at hand the means of testing legally their right to use the Panama Canal on even terms with American shipping, it is believed that he is perfectly willing to allow this issue to be made up and tried out. The possibility of the adoption of this method of securing a judicial determination of the British right may prevent the negotiations between the two Governments from being carried to the point of an ultimatum, for several years at least. The test case could not be made up until the canal is in operation. Then when a British vessel protests against the imposition of tolls, her owners, if represented by any agency in this country, might apply to a United States circuit court for a determination of their rights and from that court an appeal might be taken by either party to the United States Supreme Court.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

Spinach Salad.—The spinach left over from dinner makes a salad which may appropriately be served with roast beef, mutton, game or fish. Dress with a highly seasoned French dressing, using about six tablespoonfuls of olive oil to a pint of the spinach. Slice three hard boiled eggs. Remove the yolks, leaving the whites in rings. Chop the yolks. Form the spinach into a neat mound upon a salad platter. Place the golden yolks on top and around them arrange the whites, letting the rings overlap each other, thus giving the idea of a big aster or daisy. Decorate the base of the mound with tiny lettuce leaves.

Sago Pudding.—The following is a very old family recipe for a sago pudding which used to be served after the simple Sunday dinner of olden times. As it is rich with eggs, such a dessert is very appropriate for a simple meal. The recipe calls for six heaping tablespoonfuls of sago, a quart of cold milk, one of boiling milk, six egg yolks, a teaspoonful of sugar and a little grated nutmeg. Let the sago soak in the cold milk for five hours. Then add the boiling milk and cook the whole until soft. Beat the yolks to a smooth mass with the sugar and nutmeg. Then bake the whole in a pudding dish for about twenty minutes. When cold a meringue prepared from the whites of the eggs may be spread over the top, with, if preferred, a layer of jelly between, or the whites may be set aside to use for Monday's dessert in a fruit whip or a snow pudding.

Lemon Layer Cake.—This calls for one generous cupful of butter, two of sugar, three of pastry flour, one small one of milk, the yolks of five eggs, the whites of three, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, half a teaspoonful of soda and the juice of a fresh lemon or one teaspoonful of lemon extract. Cream the butter and sugar, add the flavoring and the yolks well beaten. Stir the whole into the flour, soda and cream of tartar, which should be sifted together three times. Beat the egg whites to a stiff froth. Fold them through the batter and bake in two

Toronto Mail—Now that Sir Wilfrid's coming tour of the west is announced, there seems less doubt about Churchill's coming to Ottawa for those naval conferences.

Toronto Star — The changes of Weather are so sudden these days that a man needs a caddy to follow him about all day with a ready variety of underclothes, straw hat, fur cap, mitts, umbrella.

Ottawa Journal (Conservative) — A Government fish hatchery has been delayed in construction owing to excessive tenders. We can do very well without it for a while. There are enough people now with fish to fry.

Ottawa Free Press—The Monetary Times reminds us of its issue in 1869 when hooped skirts were advertised and butter was fifteen cents a pound. That butter looks good, but that hooped skirt makes us rather prefer these later but more costly times.

St. Thomas Journal — Col. Sam Hughes says the people of western Canada are pleased with Borden's naval policy. If they know what his policy is in this matter they possess the confidence of the Premier to a greater extent than the easterners.

Manitoba Free Press—The two impending bye-elections in Saskatchewan caused by the elevation of Mr. Bell and Mr. Langley to the cabinet, will give Mr. Rogers another chance to try his luck in Saskatchewan. The burnt child is said, however, to dread the fire.

PARENTS' STRANGE

Goose Grease Used for Lu -
—Beads to Prevent C

Four years' medical examination of thousands of children at the Acton Council schools by Thomas and Dr. Lilian E. brought to light an astonishing number of curious beliefs of mothers. The medical officer's annual report, just issued, are still parents who hold that a child could be cured of a lung ailment by a child near gasworks or the road tunnel. For lung disease there would appear to be no value in goose grease, "which is considered far superior to other medical remedies." Poss pointed out, the efficacy of goose grease is due to the energy with which it is applied.

Increase In Soo Traffic.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—The Canadian canal statistics just issued from the Department of Railways and Canals for the period from the opening of navigation to July 31 show an increase in the volume of traffic over the corresponding period last year of 2,962,007 tons.

The greatest increase is through the Soo Canal. The increased volume of traffic through this waterway is almost equal to the total increase through all the canals, the gain being 2,793,682 tons.

A decrease, however, is shown in the volume for the Chambly, Rideau, St. Peters, Murray and Trent Canals.

Through the proportion of American and Canadian tonnage is not given, it is understood that the American traffic still exceeds the Canadian by 60 per cent.

Kitchenettes.

To open a stubborn fruit jar invert the top of the jar in hot water (boiling hot, but not boiling), taking care that the water is not deep enough to touch the glass. The principle is to expand the metal top. Then open as usual. A minute or two is sufficient. Should it remain too long the glass would also be expanded.

Do not throw away vinegar in which homemade cucumber pickles have been preserved. Keep it and use it in salad dressing instead of the ordinary vinegar. The flavor is delicious and one that cannot be gained in any other way.

To use sour milk for griddlecakes never add baking powder, but instead an even teaspoonful of baking soda to each cup of milk.

Potato balls which are salted in butter after being boiled are delicious. They should be served with a generous sprinkling of minced parsley.

Stale macaroons, which can be bought cheap at the baker's, make the most delicious addition to pudding and custards if pulverized and sprinkled over the top.

For Little Folks.

Children's millinery is really bewitching. For everyday wear there are some "bunty" shapes, with rather high crowns of coarse straw, the crown carrying the regulation band of ribbon or black ribbon velvet and numbers of close fitting basin styles in drawn taffeta or pliable pedal, some being completely round and others showing an inclination to stand out a scintillation at either side.

Especially pleasing is a pliable straw with a narrow brim and high, squarish crown—in fact a veritable Paddy shape. Worn at a saucy angle and by the right child, with laughing, piquant face, this Paddy is an assured success. Nor is the sugar loaf crown at all conspicuous by its absence, allied for the most part to a pliable brim that can be rolled or caught up at any angle most becoming to the small wearer.

Automobile Polish.

To brighten up any varnished surface use Red Cross Automobile Polish. Just the thing for Pianos, Carriages, Automobiles, Hardwood Floors, and enamelled work of any kind. It will not injure the finest surface. Price 25 cents at Wallace's Drug Store, Nanpanee.

Stir the whole into the flour, add cream and tartar, which should be sifted together three times. Beat the egg whites to a stiff froth. Fold them through the batter and bake in two layer tins. Ice when cool. One teaspoonful and a half of baking powder may be used instead of the cream of tartar and soda.

The Malignant Prune.—Prunes can be cooked to advantage in a slow oven in a pipkin closely covered. Add a sliced orange or lemon and sweeten before cooking. Cooking this fruit up quickly is what has given it its unpleasant reputation. The average cook steams prunes for a few minutes in a little sweetened water without any addition of orange or lemon and then sends them tasteless and tough to the table.

least knack about putting materials together a smart collar may be easily made by the amateur seamstress. The sailor collar illustrated is of fine handkerchief linen and cluny lace.

Canadian Shot Himself.

Galea, Ill., Aug. 27.—Charles Edress, sixty-two years of age, shot and killed himself late Sunday near here after he had been cornered by a posse. Edress recently came from Canada and is said to have been prowling around at night armed with a shotgun. He was run from a corn field Sunday and after firing several shots at the posse, killed himself. He had two revolvers, a double-barrelled shotgun, $500, and two return railroad tickets to Canada.

Three Drowned Near Chatham.

Englehart, Aug. 27.—A triple drowning occurred at Mud Lake, near Chatham, when three farmers, Grossman, Phillips and Levy, were capsized from a canoe. The bodies were recovered. The men were fishing and a heavy breeze struck the bow of the canoe, overturning it.

Dynamite Clearing Track.

Revelstoke, B.C., Aug. 27.—Good progress is being made in clearing the slide and washout two miles east of Rogers Pass and traffic may be resumed to-day. Six passenger trains are stalled between Bear Creek and Golden, westbound, and seven eastbound at Roger's Pass.

This was the first serious slide in August, being caused by a cloudburst Friday night, and three hundred men with steam shovels and dynamite have been working day and night to clear the road.

met it; nor is it possible to meet it except by the old formula that "circumstances alter cases."

Regina Leader.—The fact that the New England fire insurance companies give lower rates than some others accounts for the course of the manufacturers and the individuals who have placed insurance with them, for the lower rates mean more money in the pocket of the firm or man who insures. But to let the farmer put more money in his pocket by a simple trade arrangement—ah, no, that must not be thought of for a minute; to allow that was to wreck the Empire.

London Advertiser.—Hon. J. D. Hazen says he is gratified at the growth of opinion in favor of Imperial federation in England. Does Mr. Hazen think he has helped it by his grossly partizan speeches there? The spectacle of Canadian Cabinet Ministers like Messrs. Hazen and Foster acting as touts for one party in England was degrading to themselves and their country, and discourteous to the British Government. Mr. Borden, at least, was not guilty of this impropriety.

Brantford Expositor.—The men are giving the Provinces some return for their previous lawlessness and the Provinces is giving them a return also. Perhaps in this New Ontario scheme Hon. Mr. Doherty, Minister of Justice, will see a suggestion, and those of his 1,700 prisoners who are not fitted for any reason for road work could be employed in the establishing of another farm of this kind. Canada has thousands of farms of 600 acres which are merely awaiting work such as is being done near Fort William to blossom like the rose.

Ottawa Citizen — Prize-fighting, barred from most of the States, is rapidly gaining a foothold in the Dominion, and altogether this country is in a fair way to become the Mecca of the excommunicated thugs and desperate characters from most parts of the continent who make a living by following pugilists and race horses. Some day, after a little more experience along the line of the Toronto incident, the legislators of this country may deem it wise to follow the example of those States which finally decided that only by the complete suppression of "sport" of a certain class was respect for the law and safety of the community to be assured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE SHERIFF'S SCOOP.

But For Him the Reporters Would Have Fared Ill.

One of the most unusual and dramatic incidents in the history of Ontario's criminal courts occurred at a moment when not a single newspaper man was present in the court. The occasion was the celebrated Sifton murder trial at London, and the incident was the probably unprecedented one of an accused man pleading guilty to murder and offering no defence. It may be recalled that Joseph Sifton, an elderly Middlesex County farmer, had died a few hours after falling from a barn loft. His son, Gerald Sifton, and the latter's hired boy, George Herbert, a stolid, dull-witted youth, were charged with murder, the motive advanced being that the old man was about to marry again, with the possibility of depriving Gerald Sifton of a large part, if not all, of his father's considerable possessions. The trial attracted hundreds of curious spectators, and on the morning of the opening court, found the lower hall of the court house packed with people. They crushed their way through, only to be stopped at the stairway by two stupid county constables, who thus interpreted too literally the sheriff's order that no more individuals were to be admitted to the already crowded court room. The reporters argued in vain for ten minutes, and their annoyance increased to rage and despair when they learned that in the interval the prisoner, Herbert, on being arraigned, had quite unexpectedly pleaded guilty, instead of offering the formal "not guilty," which is expected as a matter of course from a man accused of a capital offence. This new phase of the case led to an immediate adjournment of the trial for that morning. When Sheriff Cameron appeared, the reporters poured out their tale of woe and wrath, and after partly soothing them by a sharp reprimand to the constables, he led the newspaper men to his office. Luckily for the reporters, the good sheriff was himself a member of their craft, having been for years on the staff of The Toronto Globe, and for fifteen minutes he dictated a graphic and minute account of the sensational episode which had occurred, and so complete and exhaustive was his recital that it was apparent that no word or detail had escaped his well-trained journalistic faculties. The newspaper men had to confess that so far as their accounts of the affair were concerned, they had lost little by being excluded from the court.

The outcome of the case was as curious as the incident narrated. Detective John Murray had built up a strong case against Gerald Sifton, and this was apparently strengthened by Herbert's plea of guilty and his subsequent employment as a crow witness, but as it turned out, Herbert's evidence was one of the factors which caused the failure of the case for the prosecution. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., defence counsel, by clever cross-examining secured from Herbert the statement that Gerald Sifton had struck his father on the head with an axe, dealing smashing blows with his full strength. Mr. Johnston then made the "smashing blows" the keynote of his examination of the medical experts and his address to the jury. Doctor after doctor, testifying for the crown, were compelled to admit that the blows described by Herbert would have shattered the victims skull to pieces, instead of merely fracturing it and contusing the scalp. The other weak spot in the crown's case was the fact that an important witness, a neighbor, had produced a will, purporting to be made by Joseph Sifton, but which was pronounced by the judge in a civil action, tried previous to the criminal trial, to be a clumsy and bare-faced forgery. In one trial the jury disagreed, and in the second an acquittal was secured. This left the crown in a curious quandary, with a prisoner who had pleaded guilty to a murder which, according to a jury's finding, had never occurred. Herbert, after having spent a couple of years in jail, was quietly released, and the famous Sifton case had become a part of Ontario's criminal history.—Saturday Night.

A Lucky Call.

In a measure, Mr. E. J. Chamberlin is an "emergency" man. His appointment as president of the G.T.R. recalls the time when he walked into the arms of Opportunity.

When Mr. Frank W. Morse resigned from the G.T.P. about four years ago, the late general manager, Mr. C. M. Hays, was dumbfounded. Mr. Morse was a hard man to replace, for the position called for a man who could handle large contracts, who was familiar with railway construction, and had great executive ability.

As Mr. Hays was wondering what he would do, his secretary handed him a card that had been sent in, "Edison J. Chamberlin." Mr. Chamberlin had been building railways in Mexico, and being in Montreal on a visit, dropped in to pay Mr. Hays a friendly call.

As soon as he entered the room Mr. Hays exclaimed: "You are the very man I have been looking for" — and proceeded to explain that he wanted Mr. Chamberlin to fill Mr. Morse's place. It was hard to tell which gentleman was the more surprised, but after a few hours' notice, Mr. Chamberlin took up his new duties and made good.

Woman's Influence.

Medical Health Officer Pearson of Brantford after a recent inspection of all foreign tenement dwellings here, reports that the arrival of women in the foreign homes has worked wonders in improving general living conditions. Little complaint would be found with the manner in which 2,500 foreign born are housed there.

A Disheartening Job.

Havelock's city constable started out the other day to collect the dog tax, but met with so much discouragement that he got drunk, the result being that next day he was dismissed from his office.—Orillia Packet.

MERELY COINCIDENCE?

CURIOUS EXAMPLES OF THINGS THAT CAME TRUE.

Flamsteed Was an Astronomer, But His Astrology Worked Out All Right—Mr. Williams' Dream of the Murder of Mr. Perceval in British Commons Was Fulfilled—Story of Lord Lyttleton's Ghost.

Most of us have had more or less striking coincidences happen within our own personal experience. Some of the most memorable instances published are to be found in these remarkable series of circumstances which form chains of evidence, on the strength of which many innocent men have been convicted.

Humor is to be found in coincidence, too. In the days of Flamsteed, a former Astronomer-Royal, astrologers were much in request by the public, who looked upon the Astronomer-Royal as the most potent of them all, and often consulted him in time of trouble. One day an old lady called on Flamsteed and asked him to exercise his art by discovering the whereabouts of a basket of linen she had lost. Flamsteed pretended to consult the stars, and then told his visitor that if she went to a certain field she would find her belongings. The woman went to the place indicated, and, much to the astronomer's astonishment found her basket of linen intact.

One of the most remarkable instances of this kind—a vision prior to or simultaneous with an historical occurrence represented in the vision—was Mr. Williams' dream of the murder of Mr. Perceval in the lobby of the House of Commons on May 11th, 1812. Mr. Williams was a native of Redruth in Cornwall. On the night of the 2nd or 3rd of May he dreamt that he saw a little man whom he afterwards learned was Mr. Perceval, the Prime Minister, shot by another man whose dress he described, and who took a pistol from under his coat. The tragedy took place in the lobby of the House of Commons, and the murderer was laid hold of by several gentlemen present. Such in brief, was Mr. Williams' dream, and he dreamt it no fewer than three times that same night. This made such an impression on him that he wished to journey up to London, to warn Mr. Perceval. But his friends dissuaded him, pointing out that he would probably be laughed at for his pains. Williams yielded, but watched the newspapers. He wrote afterwards:

"On the evening of the 13th of May my second son, returning from Truro, came in a hurried way into the room where I was sitting and exclaimed, 'Oh, father, your dream has come true! Mr. Perceval has been shot in the lobby of the House of Commons; there is an account come from London to Truro written after the newspapers were printed.' Mr. Perceval, as you know, was assassinated on the 11th. Another very curious circumstance in connection with this affair was that a rumor or report of the assassination of Mr. Perceval reached Bude Kirk, a village near Annan, in Scotland, on the night of Sunday, May 10th, the day before the crime was committed! This was mentioned in The Times of May 25th, 1812, and was confirmed by Rev. Mr. Yorston, of Hoddam, who visited Bude Kirk a short time afterwards.

SLACK BARRELS MADE ADA WORTH MILLION HALF DOLLARS.

That Canada is fast losing its position as a producer of timber is brought out by statistics published by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior show that, whereas 2,778 staves were cut in the Dominion in 1911, 7,293,000 were imported.

In the manufacture of slack, used for the dry, rough duties such as lime, potatoes, dry fish, flour, cereals, etc., wood dominates in Canada's production. The principal wood employed is spruce, which is rapidly coming into general use as a source of staves. Eleven million more spruce staves were cut in 1911 than in 1910. Elm is exhausted, birch will take its place, being compact, flexible and available in great quantities.

The total value of the material in the slack cooperage industry in Canada for the past year was 702. In 1910 it was $1,505,119, $13,000 more. Imports and exports of materials and finished products respectively, $320,992 and $1,194,529.

The total amount of material according to an estimate of the Forestry Branch, was over 100 feet, board measure. Through day, May 10th, the day before the crime was committed! This was mentioned in The Times of May 25th, 1812, and was confirmed by Rev. Mr. Yors-toun, of Hoddam, who visited Bude-Kirk a short time afterwards.

A somewhat similar affair which was generally known as Lord Lyttleton's ghost — although nobody knew what the ghost was or whether there was any spectre at all—was said by Dr. Johnson to have been "the most extraordinary thing that has happened in my day." Thomas Lord Lyttleton was born in 1774. As a young man he played the prodigal at home and abroad, until at the age of 30 he took his seat in the House of Lords. In November, 1804, his party went into Opposition. On Thursday, November 25, he denounced the Government in a notable speech. Referring to a sinecure which he held, he said, "Perhaps I shall not keep it long!"

On the previous night Lyttleton had seen the ghost, or apparition, or whatever it was, and had been told that he would die in three days. He mentioned it to Rowan Hamilton on the 26th, and also to a Captain Ascough, through whom it reached Mrs Thrale, who chronicled it. On the same day he went to Epsom with some friends and mentioned the visitation to them. About midnight on the 28th November Lord Lyttleton died suddenly in bed, his valet having left him for a moment. The cause of death was not stated and there was no inquest. Most of the narrators, including Mrs. Thrale, who recorded the warning before news of his lordship's death reached her, called the affair a dream, but the coincidence of its fulfilment is the mysterious and significant part of it.

Still another example of the long arm of coincidence is given by Dr. Ebers, the head of a great lunatic asylum. He had been waiting at the station for a friend who had not arrived when an old Scotchwoman rushed up to him, "Oh, sir!" she cried, "Thank God you've come. Now take me to him."

The doctor was naturally astonished, and the woman explained that she had not heard of her sailor son for months. She had been warned in a dream to go to London and wait at the station, where an old gentleman would meet her and take her to where her son was. "And you are the old gentleman," she concluded.

Still Dr. Ebers was no wiser. He took her story to his wife. Suddenly he recollected that some months previously a man was sent to the asylum. He had fallen from aloft, cracked his skull and was then only recovering from an operation. Next day a meeting was arranged, and sure enough the injured man was the old lady's sailor son. In a very short time they both returned to Scotland, both convinced that their reunion was a special dispensation of Providence.

RRELS MADE IN CANADORTH MILLION AND ALF DOLLARS.

Canada is fast losing her position as a fast producer of tight cooperage. It is shown by statistics compiled out by the Forestry Branch of the Interior. These show that whereas 2,778,000 oak casks were imported in 1910, only 1,000 were imported in 1911.

The manufacture of slack cooperage, the dry, rough cooperage of lime, potatoes, apples, etc., which is the main product of the Canadian cooperage industry, is fast coming into more and more of a source of supply.

In 1911 more spruce staves and fewer elm staves having 1911 than in 1910. When the birch will probably be used, being comparatively available in great quantities. The value of the materials used in the cooperage industry in the past year was $1,465,000. It was $1,595,119 or some $130,119 more. May Restore the Garden of Eden.

The restoration of the Garden of Eden is a sentimental feature of the great irrigation project by which Mr. William Willcocks hopes to bring back the early fertility to a great region in Asiatic Turkey.

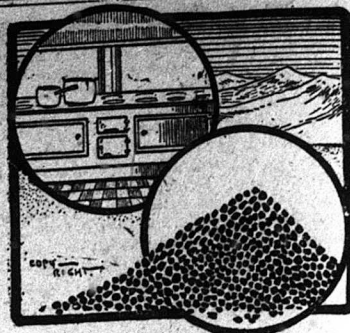

The country bordering the lower Euphrates and Tigris Rivers was long a centre of prosperity and wealth. It was made to flourish by extensive irrigation works, the ruins of which still exist, but the land is now made barren by drought, though much of it is swept by occasional floods.

The English engineers propose to reconstruct the ancient works on an enlarged and improved plan. They have found a depression in the desert into which the overflow from the Euphrates can be led, and they expect to be able to regulate the Tigris, though this is a more difficult feat than the ancients never fully accomplished. The probable great productivity of the delta of the two rivers under suitable irrigation is indicated by analyses showing the soil to be richer than that of Egypt or the Sudan.

It is believed that the Garden of Eden will be found just north of Ur, at the ancient junction of the Tigris and Euphrates. Ur is supposed to have been a maritime town, but its remains are now six miles west of the Euphrates and 125 miles from the sea.

EVERY LINE IS INTERESTING.

The Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer has evidently found the secret of perpetual youth. After sixty-eight years of untiring faithful services devoted to the upbuilding, and shaping the fortunes and destiny of the Dominion, it still continues to set the pace in the field of weekly newspaperdom in Canada.

It has always aimed at the highest standards, and proven itself to be a most reliable national and home newspaper. The agricultural inter- ests and general welfare of the nation have been and are still in the broadest sense of the term, its chief concern.

In order to maintain this premier position and keep abreast of the phe- nomenal development and growth of Canada. The Weekly Golbe and Can- ada Farmer has increased its facili- ties and perfected its mechanical equipment. Apparently nothing has been left undone to make every de- tail from the gathering of the news, to the delivery of the paper to the reader complete. The Outlook (New York) was pleased to say in a recent issue, that it is now one of the most complete newspaper plants on the continent.

The staff has also been increased that the improved facilities may be fully utilized. Full and accurate synopsis of the world's news written by trained men, who know how to say what is necessary in the fewest words; original and carefully edited articles: special contributions from leading writers. Miscellaneous read- ing of the very highest standard are features which make it the leader among Canadian Metropolitan Week- lies. Every department pulsates with vitality.

The four pages of bright pictures on calendered paper is in itself equal to fifty-two of the ordinary premiums given away each year by some papers.

Very favorable arrangements have been made with the Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer whereby our readers can have it in combination with this paper on remarkable fav- orable terms.

Sample copies will be sent to any address by making application either verbally, or by card to this office.

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them: I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby im- proved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee.

BANK OF ENGLAND.

Romantic and Tragic History of a Famous Institution.

No other banking institution has so romantic a history as that pertaining to the Bank of England, "the Old Lady of Threadneedle street."

The founder of the bank was William Paterson, an adventurous Scotchman who, it is said, at one time of his life had controlled every privateer that sailed the Spanish Main. Paterson laid the foundation of his fortune in the buying and selling of slaves and the clearing of $500,000 as his share of the gold found on a sunken Spanish galleon.

It seems to be agreed that it was with these funds and those derived from his buccaneering expedition that Paterson, who had been banished to Holland by James II., financed, in part, the expedition of the Prince of Orange across the Boyne.

With the advent of William III. to the English throne came the first plans for the establishment of a national bank. Those writers who treat of the "inside history" of the times entertain no doubt that, while William III. was indeed the moving spirit of the scheme, Paterson was, nevertheless, the indispensable one in the realization thereof. He was the official mouthpiece at the weekly meeting of the famous group of financiers known as "the Wednesday Club."

The Jacobites unavailingly denounced the bank as a revolutionary institution whereby the King would gather unto himself all the wealth of

MONTREAL, Aug. 28.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba new and old crop low grades was fair, at an advance in prices of 1½d in some cases, but the volume of business done was small. Business in oats was quiet, and the tone of the market is easier. Local demand for flour continues good for small lots, but export trade is dull. Millfeed fairly active and firm. Butter in better demand and firmer. Cheese strong and fairly active. Exports for the week were 53,345 boxes, against 74,635 a year ago. Eggs firm.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 83c to 84c. Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 49c; do., No. 3, 47c to 48c. Barley—Manitoba feed, 63c to 64c; malt-ing, 62c.

$2.50 to $3.75; loads of good butchers, $5.50 to $6.75; medium, $5 to $5.25; common, $4.50 to $4.75; choice, heavy cows, $5.25 to $5.50; 50% cows, $4.50 to $5; medium cows, $2.50 to $4.25; common cows, $2.75 to $3.50; canners, $1.50 to $2.50; light bulls, $2.75 to $4.75; heavy bulls, $5 to $5.50.

Stockers and Feeders

Feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs., sold at $5.25 to $5.50; steers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $4.75 to $5; stockers, $4 to $4.50.

Milkers and Springers

There was a moderate delivery of milkers and springers, that sold at from $40 to $30 each, and one at $37.

Veal Calves.

There was a wide range in quality and prices of veal calves, selling at from $3 to $9 per cwt.; those selling at $9 were choice, new, milk-fed veals.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, of light weight, sold at $4 to $5 per cwt.; heavy ewes, $3 to $4; lambs, $7.25 to $7.85.

Hogs.

The buyers reported the hog market lower, at $3.50 for select, fed and watered, but a few select were reported sold at $3.55 to $3.75, fed and watered.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 28.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 24 were 500 cattle, 3000 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 650 calves. The supply on the market this morning consisted of 900 cattle, 2000 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 350 calves.

There was no actual change in the condition of the market for cattle as compared with this day week. The supply was ample to fill all requirements, and in consequence the tone was steady. The quality of the stock coming forward is steadily improved, and especially the northwest ranch cattle, of which there were about 400 head on the market.

The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and, as they all wanted some beef, the demand was good and a fairly active trade was done. Sales of full loads of northwest ranch cattle, averaging 1100 pounds each, were sold at $6.25 to $6.50, and picked lots at $8.75 per 100 pounds, while the top price paid for picked lots of choice Ontario steers was $7.25 per 100 pounds. There was a good demand from packers for supplies, and considerable business was also done by canners in bulls at $2.50 to $3 per 100 pounds.

The supply of hogs was only fair, and some of the packers were short of stock. The demand was keener than usual, and an active trade was done, but there was no change in prices as compared with a week ago, they being firm, with sales of selected lots at $3.50 to $9 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

The trade in sheep and lambs was active, there being a good demand from both packers and butchers for supplies, and prices ruled steady, with sales of Ontario lambs at $6 to $6.25, and Quebec stock at $5.50 to $5.75 per 100 pounds. The offering of calves was small, for which the demand was good at firm prices.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.25; do., medium, $5 to $6.25; do., common, $4 to $4.50; canners, $2.50 to $3; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5 to $5.25; do., medium, $4 to $4.75; do., bulls, $4 to $5; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70; do., common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

Sheep, ewes, $3.75 to $4; bucks and culls, $2.25 to $3.50. Lambs, $3.50 to $6.25. Hogs, f.o.b., $3.50 to $9. Calves, $3 to $10.

Cheese Markets.

CANTON, N.Y., Aug. 28.—There were 5000 boxes of cheese sold at 15½c, and 500 packages of butter sold at 27c.

LINDSAY, Aug. 28.—Nine hundred boxes of cheese on the Victoria County cheese board this morning sold for 13 1/16c to Buyers Gillespie, Flavell and Thompson.

UTICA, N.Y., Aug. 28.—Prices ruled fairly firm at the Utica Dairy Board of Trade meeting to-day. The sales were: 2340 boxes small colored at 14½c; 1160 boxes small white at 14½c.

Wealth of Great Britain.

Within the last twenty years over 120 millionaires have died in the United Kingdom. Between them they have left over $1,150,000,000, or an average of nearly $10,000,000 each.

Inhabitants of the British Isles are making about $10,000,000,000 a year, and the national capital comes to nearly $60,000,000,000. Britain is just six times richer than she was a century ago.

Between 11,000 and 12,000 people are in enjoyment of incomes of over $20,000 a year, and some 1,200,000 are in receipt of incomes or salaries of over $800 annually.

The Jacobites unavailingly denounced the bank as a revolutionary institution whereby the King would gather unto himself all the wealth of the nation. About the only concession the Tory malcontents of the day were able to extract from the Government was a law, remaining in force to this day, that the bank might not lend money to the King or to the Government, except by the consent of both Houses of Parliament.

One of the bloody episodes in the history of the bank is that embraced in the story of Charles Walter Godfrey, the partner of Paterson. It appears that Godfrey, while crossing the channel in the midst of a terrific storm and laden with 60,000 in drafts for the aid of King William, who was just then besieging Namur against the forces of Louis XIV. insisted upon his right to deliver the warrant for the money into the hands of the King, then in the trenches, under hot fire. As he handed the documents to the King, saying, in response to William's growl of remonstrance, 'Am I, then, more exposed to danger than your majesty?' a cannon ball swept away his head.

Not so very many years ago there stood over the massive fireplace in the directors' room of the bank three rusty specimens of the old "Brown Bess," together with a number of roughly shaped bullets. In these relics was embodied a picture of the November night in 1780 when the mob of Gordon rioters marched down from Newgate, setting fire to every Catholic chapel on the way, and advancing with a force of 5,000 upon the bank itself.

The clerks, armed with muskets, were unprovided with shot. Before them lay rows of leaden inkstands, suggesting the possibilities of a new use. Quickly the inkstands were melted and turned into bullets. The muskets were loaded. At every window of the bank stood two marksmen, their guns trained on the mob below. Yet the rioters came on until they were within 10 yards of the bank gates.

Then sharp and clear above the frightful din rose the order to fire, and from the windows poured a deadly volley. When the smoke finally cleared away 250 lay dead or dying in the open space now covered by the esplanade of the Royal Exchange. The attacking army wavered, stopped, broke line, and fled, and the Gordon riots were at an end.

Preparing Him For Matrimony.

In South Africa some of the savage tribes have a peculiar ceremony which they put the matrimonial candidate through previous to his entering the marriage state. His hands are tied up in a bag containing five ants for two hours. If he bears unmoved the tortures of their stings he is considered qualified to cope with the nagging and daily jar and fret of married life.

Looking For Him.

The vicar of a Kew Church (Eng.) is advertising for the person who has been in the habit of placing in the offertory bag an envelope containing a dirty and somewhat greasy halfpenny stamp, so that he may be able to exchange the stamps for current coin of the realm, and have the opportunity of making the acquaintance of a most interesting parishioner.

THE KING'S PRIZEMAN

LONDONER'S VICTORY AT BISLEY IS A POPULAR CNE.

The Winner of the Big Event In the Imperial Rifle Matches Has Tried Hard In Previous Years—His Is the Only Case In Which Father and Son Are Both Holders of the Medal.

The honor of King's Prizeman at Bisley has this year fallen to an Englishman, Private A. G. Fulton, of the Queen's Westminsters, who, after a long and creditable apprenticeship to fame, has at length achieved the ambition of his heart. On no fewer than five occasions Private Fulton has fired in the hundred marksmen left in the last stage for the King's Prize. In 1905-6-7 and again in 1910 he thus reached the threshold of the pre-eminent distinction in rifle shooting. Now the promise of all these splendid efforts is fulfilled, and he emerges as King's Prizeman. As every rifleman knows, the King's Prize is shot for in three stages, the third evolving the premier marksman of his year. In the first stage the Bronze Medal was won by Corporal Ommundsen, of the Queen's Edinburgh, one of the finest shots in the world, who has previously won the King's Prize, the Silver Cross on 3, the Grand Aggregate thrice, and the Service Rifle Championship thrice. This year he had an aggregate of 103. Three hundred qualified to fire in the second stage of the King's competition for the Silver Medal, and this was at length won by Regimental Sergt.-Instructor of Musketry S. H. Harvey, of the South African Railways, with 196 points.

In the final stage of the King's Prize the competition was keen, and was watched by a brilliant audience, which included Lord Roberts and the Secretary of State for War. The latter congratulated Private Fulton, on behalf of the Government, on his victory. According to traditional custom, Fulton was chaired and, led by a band, escorted through the camp to the council offices, where his father and mother received congratulations from numerous friends. Fulton, who is 25, assists his father in the business of a gunmaker, and Mr. Fulton, sr., was himself the gold medalist of 1888 when serving as a member of

A REST FOR BIRRELL?

ASQUITH'S COLLEAGUE MAY TAKE AN EASIER POST.

Secretary for Ireland Has Been Talk- ed of for Ambassador Bryce's Place and Also for the India Office—He Is a Litterateur and His Name Is Bye-word Among Readers for a Certain Kind of Work.

When it was recently rumored that British Ambassador James Bryce might retire, one of the men mentioned as a possible successor was Augustine Birrell, now chief secretary for Ireland, in which capacity it was his duty to meet Prime Minister Asquith in his recent visit to Dublin. The chief secretary also figured in the news of the suffragette riots in Dublin, during which were attempted several attacks on the Premier. Birrell was formerly a member of the Liberal Cabinet as president of the

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL.

Board of Education. He was born near Liverpool in 1850, the younger son of a Nonconformist minister, was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he is now a fellow, was admitted to the bar and became a bencher of the inner temple, was for several years a professor of law at the University College of London and was a member of Parliament, representing two constituencies and contesting for a third.

Augustine Birrell is one of the foremost literary men in Premier Asquith's celebrated "literary Cabinet" and is extensively represented in contemporary letters. His delightful chats about books, notably "In the shadow of the Bodeleian," have added a word to the English language. The art of entertainingly discussing bookish rarities, first editions and forgotten tomes is called "Birrelling," and the word has apparently come to stay.

Another rumor concerning Mr. Birrell is that he will be transferred to the position of secretary for India. The post is an easier one than the secretaryship for Ireland, and Mr. Birrell is in need of a rest from his arduous labors since the inception of the Home Rule measure.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

WITH the best intentions in the world to be cordial a man finds it hard work when he has a working corn on his toe and a crick in the back of his neck.

Still it is small consolation to reflect that if it weren't for us workers the shirkers couldn't exist.

Instead of rejoicing in the continual sunshine the pessimist repines that the roses and strawberries have a short season.

A man is a fool who talks too much unless he is paid a good salary for it.

We never heard of any one starting a bank with the proceeds of the sale of the silver lining of the clouds of his dark career.

One reason why some people appear ungenerous about helping others is that they have no time, being engaged in expertly skinning those others.

The woman who takes in stairs to scrub is probably as proud of her husband as is the woman who takes in stares from the depth of her limousine.

Some homes are furnished in good taste and some on the installment plan.

Man is a creature of habit, but he can't help that because he has got so in the habit of it.

Some men are bashful because they are bachelors, and others are bachelors because they are bashful.

Long Distance Courage.

How brave we are! How we can put So much defiance in our tone And show that we are not afraid When we can talk by telephone! We get a person on the line; We call him up and call him down And let him clearly understand We are the fiercest man in town.

Good sooth and several stronger words, We feel if he were only there That we would punch him in the jaw And slap his face and pull his hair! And did that treatment not suffice To make him understand the drive That we were trying to get at We'd eat him once or twice alive.

And as he ventures to reply And very likely sasses back More furious at this we grow Until for words we almost lack. So does our anger grow in strength As every grievance we recall We almost pull the telephone From its position on the wall.

But when a few hours later on You get together on the street It seems then to a passerby Two ancient chums have chanced to meet, And all is peace and pleasantness, The fighting spirit dies away, And any one might think they saw Two little lambskins out at play.

It is an absolutely unprecedented occurrence for a father and son to win the gold medal. Armoury-Sergt. Fulton, the father, has a branch of his business in the camp, and it was from his office that he and Mrs. Fulton were called for the purpose of being congratulated at the N.R.A. headquarters. The gold medalist shot in the international match recently at Stockholm. He has won the Alexandra and All-comers Aggregates at former meetings of the N.R.A. The St. George's Vase and Gold Cross, second only in interest to the King's Prize, was won by Lance-Corpl. H. A. Mann, of the H.A.C. The shooting in this competition was very erratic.

Can Really Fly.

The old problem of the flight of the flying fish has been revived by William Allingham, of the British meteorological office. Naturalists usually explain that the propelling force is entirely the action of the powerful tail before the fish leaves the water, and that the only part played by the "wings"—or enlarged and wing-like fins—is to serve as parachutes for somewhat extending the leap. They believe that this satisfactorily accounts for the observed flights of a few rods to 200 yards or more. It appears, however, that many seamen claim that the passage through the air is a real flight, the wing-fins being kept in rapid motion, and that the fishes have a bird-like power of changing their course in the air—one having been seen to turn as much as 60 degrees to avoid collision with a vessel's rigging.

Enlivening the Law Courts.

A recent reference in The Glasgow Herald to the judicial oath reminds a correspondent of that paper that he once heard the late Sheriff Hamilton administering the oath in Edinburgh Sheriff Small Debt Court to a witness who was dull of hearing. "I swear by Almighty God," said the sheriff. The witness put his hollowed hand to his ear and asked: "Wha dae ye sweer by?" The same witness was asked by an agent: "What does your wife do?" to which he replied: "She keeps a sweetie shop," adding as an afterthought, "bit she's deid." In those days there was an Edinburgh Bailie who always began the oath: "I swear by Almighty Gods"—probably a result of slipshodness rather than pantheistic belief. Many court reporters have heard a witness swear to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and anything but the truth."

Leigh Hunt's Daughter.

The fact that a child of Leigh Hunt's is still in the land of the living will come as a surprise to most people.

Leigh Hunt was born on October 19, 1784, and it was as long ago as 1812 that he was fined $2,500 and sent to prison for two years by Lord Ellenborough for describing the Regent as a "corpulent Adonis of 50." He was a friend of Keats, Charles Lamb and Tom Moore and was present at the strange scene when Byron cremated Shelley's body.

His only surviving daughter, whose husband, Charles Smith-Cheltnam, died a few weeks ago, is now lying dangerously ill and is in very reduced circumstances. A public appeal is now being made in order that Leigh Hunt's daughter may not know the shame that attaches to the poor house.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Writer Depicts England Three Hundred Years Hence.

The last century or so has been a sort of world-drunk—the world's one magnificent drunk. Man has gone on a "burst," and been drinking up a planet all at once. The human race has been really proud of its deed. Science has helped the work all along. Humanitarianism has lent it all possible assistance. The church has blessed it, and laid down the theory that any stoppage or even diminution of the proceedings is unscriptural, says a writer in The National Review. The two outstanding features of the period have been an incredible increase of the old food demand accompanied by an actual diminution of the possible area of supply through the turning of corn fields or possible corn fields into cities, and the invention of all sorts of new demands to meet the necessities of an increasingly complex civilization. Another two centuries or so of expansion at the present rate is calculated to make the old countries of the world a herd of dreary regions. They will contain no quiet spot in which two lovers may get out of sight of their prying fellow-creatures—no place where a man may propose to a maid save in the presence of six listeners—no leafy retreat where a bard may compose a scrap or verse without a dozen onlookers pointing over his shoulders at a dubious rhyme.

Even the homicide will have to leave the body of his victim on the roof unless he is prepared to bury it in the full glare of publicity. In the England of some three centuries hence, with its two thousand million people—assuming the much-valued birthrate to continue—mankind will probably sleep eight in a bed, and seclusion will be the luxury of the very rich. Possibly even they will not always be able to buy the article. The present variety of civilization—the civilization of coal and iron, and dust, and hurry, and an unprecedented growth of population—will probably begin to die out where it commenced. England gained its commercial and manufacturing supremacy through being the first modern state to set about the wholesale destruction of its forests and the utterly reckless using up of its irreplaceable coal and iron supplies.

How long the coal and iron will last is a question on which no two authorities appear to agree. All that is really known is that the supply is not unlimited, and that the demand grows larger daily. England, in its haste to be rich, also became the first country to depend almost wholly for its food and timber on foreign suppliers. And when the present suppliers reach, as previous ones have done, the point at which they want their own loaf and their own tree for local consumption, then the heaviest blow is likely to fall on the country which thereby has its resources most completely cut off. There will be first an era of high prices, which will be good for the countries with food to sell and bad for the buyers of food just in proportion to their degree of dependence. Then there will be the era of absolute scarcity. And, finally in all probability, will come the time of complete stoppage of supplies. And after that—when the loaf wars are over and done with—there will perhaps be a new civilization, with far less population, less commerce, less hurry, less motor-cars, less luxury, less pounding of machinery, and much more hard agriculture.

When Hanging Was Common.

It is almost impossible to hang a woman in this country, but in old-time England this was not the case. King George III. once offered 234 women offenders an alternative to hanging. They might, should they choose, be transported instead. Six of them voted for hanging. Many women were then hanged for far less crimes than smashing windows. George Paston, for instance, notes the fate of a woman left husbandless by the press gang: "Rendered desperate, she entered a shop and took up a piece of linen, but laid it down again. For this she was condemned to death and was hanged, we are told, with her infant at her breast."

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

It must be, then, for some affair of importance. And what is the affair of the greatest importance to a pretty woman of twenty-five? Love.

But was it on her own account or on account of another person that she exposed herself to such hazards? This was a question the young man asked himself, whom the demon of jealousy already gnawed to the heart, neither more nor less than a settled lover.

There was, besides, a very simple means of satisfying himself whither Mme. Bonacieux was going. That was to follow her.

But at the sight of the young man and at the noise of the steps which she heard resound behind her Mme. Bonacieux uttered a little cry and fled.

D'Artagnan ran after her. He came up to her before she had traversed a third of the street. She sank upon one knee, crying in a choking voice:

"Kill me, if you please, you shall know nothing!"

D'Artagnan raised her by passing his arm round her waist; but, as he felt by her weight she was on the point of fainting, he made haste to reassure her by protestations of devotedness. Mme. Bonacieux recognized the voice. She opened her eyes and uttered a cry of joy.

"Oh, it is you! It is you! Thank God! Thank God!"

"Yes, it is I," said D'Artagnan; "it is I whom God has sent to watch over you."

"Was it with that intention you followed me?" asked the young woman, with a coquettish smile.

"No," said D'Artagnan; "no, I confess it. It was chance that threw me young woman in a manner so serious as made D'Artagnan start in spite of himself. "Oh, meddle in nothing which concerns me. I exist no longer for you."

"Must Aramis do as much as I, madame?" said D'Artagnan, deeply piqued.

"This is the second or third time, monsieur, that you have repeated that name, and yet I have told you that I do not know him."

"You do not know the man at whose shutter you went and knocked? Indeed, madame, you think me too credulous!"

"All this will be cleared up at a later period," murmured the young woman.

"If you could see my heart," said D'Artagnan, "you would there read so much curiosity that you would pity me and so much love that you would instantly satisfy my curiosity."

"You speak very quickly of love, monsieur."

"That is because love has come suddenly upon me and for the first time and because I am only twenty years old. Listen, I am already upon the scent. About three months ago I was near having a duel with Aramis, concerning a handkerchief resembling that you showed to the woman in the house, for a handkerchief marked in the same manner, I am sure. If you were to be arrested with that handkerchief and that handkerchief were to be seized would you not be compromised?"

"In what way? Are not the initials mine—C. B.—Constance Bonacieux?"

"Or Camille de Bois-Tracy?"

"Silence, monsieur: Once again, silence! Ah, since the dangers I incur on my own account cannot stop you think of those you may yourself run! Monsieur, by the courtesy of a shet.

"But you will remain, will you not? You are not afraid?" said D'Artagnan, coming back to recommend courage to his lackey.

"Be satisfied, monsieur. There is nothing I would not do to prove to monsieur that I am attached to him."

"Good!" said D'Artagnan, and with all the swiftness of his legs, already a little fatigued, however, with the exercise of the day and night, he directed his course toward M. de Treville's.

M. de Treville was not at his hotel. His company was on guard at the Louvre. He was at the Louvre with his company. He must get at M. de Treville. It was of importance that he should be informed of what was going on. D'Artagnan resolved to endeavor to get into the Louvre.

He therefore went down the Rue des Petits Augustins and came up to the quay in order to take the Pont Neuf. As he gained the top of the Rue Guenegaud he saw two persons coming self between the combatants, holding the swords with her hair. "Milord!" cried D'Artagnan, moved by a sudden idea, "milord me, monsieur, but are you?" "Milord, the Duke of Buckingham," said Mme. Bonacieux in an "And now you may ruin us!" "Milord—madame, I ask pardons! But I love her, I was jealous. You know I love, milord. Pardon me, and me how I can risk my life for your grace!"

"You are a brave young Buckingham, holding out to D'Artagnan, who pressed it. "You offer me your sword the same frankness I accept. Follow us at a distance paces to the Louvre, and watches us slay him!"

Fortunately D'Artagnan opportunity to give the duke of his devotion, and the young and the handsome musket the Louvre by the wick Echelle without meeting with terrurpion. As for D'Artagnan, he repaired to the cabaret of de Pin, where he found P Aramis, who were waiting. But without giving them nation of the alarm and Inc he had caused them he told he had terminated the affair which he had for a moment he should stand in need of assistance.

CHAPTER IX.

George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham.

MME. BONACIEUX duke entered the Louvre without difficulty. Entered into the interior court, the duke and the young man kept along the wall for about five steps. This space Mme. Bonacieux pushed a little open by day, but generally at night. After traversing passages she introduced a key, opened a door and pushed into an apartment lighted night lamp, saying: "Remain here, lord duke. Some one will then went out by the door which she locked, so that he found himself a prisoner.

Nevertheless, isolated as he must say that the Duke of Buckingham did not experience any fear. Brave, even rash, and, indeed, he had learned that the message from Anne of Austria the faith of which he had Paris, was a snare, and in gaining England he had a position in which he had been declared to the queen that not go back again without seen her. The queen had actively refused, but at length afraid that the duke, if he would commit some rash had already decided upon and urging his immediate when on the very evening to this decision Mme. Bonacieux was charged with going to the duke and conducting him to the Louvre, was carried off. I days it was not known what come of her, and everything in suspense. But when one with a coquettish smile.

"No," said D'Artagnan; "no, I confess it. It was chance that threw me in your way. I saw a female knocking at the window of one of my friends, Aramis."

"Aramis! Who is he?"

"Come, come!"

"This is the first time I ever heard his name pronounced."

"It is the first time, then, that you ever went to that house?"

"Certainly it is."

"It was not him, then, you came to seek?"

"Not the least in the world. Besides, you must have seen that the person I spoke to was a woman."

"Who is she?"

"Oh, that is not my secret!"

"My dear Mme. Bonacieux, you are charming, but at the same time you are one of the most mysterious women."

"Give me your arm."

"Where are you going?"

"You will see, because you will leave me at the door."

"Shall I wait for you?"

"That will be useless."

"You will return alone, then?"

"Perhaps I may, perhaps I may not."

"But will the person who shall accompany you afterward be a man or a woman?"

"I don't know yet."

"I will wait for your coming out."

"In that case, adieu."

"But you have claimed—"

"The aid of a gentleman, not the watchfulness of a spy."

"Well, madame, I perceive I must act as you please. I promise to do all you wish if you will allow me to accompany you where you are going."

"And you will leave me afterward without waiting for my coming out again?"

"Yes."

"Take my arm, then, and let us go on."

D'Artagnan offered his arm to Mme. Bonacieux, who willingly took it, half laughing, half trembling, and both gained the top of Rue la Harpe. When arrived there the young woman seemed to hesitate, as she had before done in the Rue Vaugirard. She, however, appeared by certain signs to recognize a door, and approaching that door:

"And now, monsieur," said she, "it is here I have business. A thousand thanks for your honorable company."

"And you will have nothing to fear on your return?"

"I shall have nothing to fear but robbers. What could they take from me? I have not a denier about me."

"You forget that beautiful handkerchief with the coat of arms which I found at your feet and replaced in your pocket!"

"Silence! Silence, imprudent man! Do you wish to destroy me?"

"Come, come, madame!" cried D'Artagnan, seizing her hands and surveying her with an ardent glance, "come, be more generous. Trust to me!"

"Ask my own secrets, and I will tell them to you, but those of others—that is quite another thing."

"It is all very well," said D'Artagnan. "I shall discover them. As these secrets may have an influence over your life these secrets must become mine."

"Beware of what you do!" cried the lence! Ah, since the dangers I incur on my own account cannot stop you think of those you may yourself run! Monsieur, by the courtesy of a gentleman depart. There—there is midnight striking. That is the hour at which I am expected."

"Madame," said the young man, bowing, "I can refuse nothing asked of me thus. Be satisfied, I will depart and will return home instantly."

"Ah, I was quite sure you were a good and brave young man!" said Mme. Bonacieux, holding out her hand to him and placing the other upon the knocker of a little door almost hidden in the wall.

D'Artagnan seized the hand that was held out to him and kissed it ardently.

"Ah, I wish I had never seen you!" cried D'Artagnan.

"Well," resumed Mme. Bonacieux in a voice that was almost caressing and pressing the hand of D'Artagnan, who had not left hold of hers—"well, I will not say as much as you do."

By a violent effort D'Artagnan sprang away, running, while Mme. Bonacieux knocked, as she had done at the shutter, three light and regular taps. Then when he had gained the angle of the street he turned. The door had been opened and shut again. The mercer's pretty wife had disappeared.

D'Artagnan pursued his way. In five minutes he was in the Rue des Fossoyeurs.

"Poor Athos!" said he. "He will never guess what all this means. He will have fallen asleep waiting for me or else he will have returned home, where he will have learned that a woman had been there. A woman at Athos' house!"

After all," continued D'Artagnan, "there was certainly one in Aramis' house. All this is very strange. I should like to know how it will all end." The last sentence was spoken aloud.

"Badly, monsieur—badly!" replied a voice, which the young man recognized as that of Planchet. "M. Athos is arrested. He was found in your lodging. They took him for you."

"And by whom was he arrested?"

"By the guards whom the black men you put to flight fetched."

"Why did he not tell them his name? Why did he not tell them he knew nothing about this affair?"

"He took care not to do so, monsieur. On the contrary, he came up to me and said: 'It is your master that wants his liberty at this moment and not I, since he knows everything and I know nothing. They will believe he is arrested, and that will give him time. In three days I will tell them who I am, and they cannot fail to set me at liberty again.' Four conveyed him away, I don't know where—to the Bastille or Fort l'Eveque. Two remained with the black men, who rummaged every place out and took all the papers. The two last mounted guard at the door during this examination. Then, when all was over, they went away, leaving the house empty and the doors open."

"And Porthos and Aramis?"

"I could not find them. They did not come."

"Well, don't stir. If they come tell them what has happened. Let them wait for me at the Pomme de Pin. Here it would be dangerous. The house may be watched. I will run to M. de Treville to tell him all this and will join them there."

"Very well, monsieur," said Planchet.

"In the name of heaven, milord!" cried Mme. Bonacieux, throwing herself between the combatants.

whose appearance very much struck him. One was a man and the other a woman, the latter very much like Mme. Bonacieux in size and step, the former could be nobody but Aramis.

Besides, the woman had on that black cloak whose outline D'Artagnan could still see reflected upon the shutter of the Rue de Vaugirard and upon the door of the Rue de la Harpe.

And, still further, the man wore the uniform of a musketeer.

They took the bridge. That was D'Artagnan's road, as D'Artagnan was going to the Louvre. D'Artagnan followed them.

He had not gone twenty steps before he became convinced that the woman was really Mme. Bonacieux and the man Aramis.

He felt himself doubly betrayed. Mme. Bonacieux had declared to him by all that was holy that she did not know Aramis, and a quarter of an hour after having made this assertion he found her hanging on the arm of Aramis. D'Artagnan resolved to unravel the mystery.

The young man and woman perceived they were watched and redoubled their speed. D'Artagnan determined upon his course. He passed them, then returned, so as to meet them exactly before the Samaritaine, which was illuminated by a lamp which threw its light over all that part of the bridge.

"What do you want, monsieur?" demanded the musketeer, drawing back a step. He had a foreign accent.

"It is not Aramis!" cried D'Artagnan.

"No, monsieur, it is not Aramis; and by your exclamation I perceive you have mistaken me for another. Allow me, then, to pass on, since it is not with me you have anything to do."

"You are right, monsieur, it is not with you I have anything to do. It is with madame here."

"Ah," said Mme. Bonacieux in a tone of reproach, "ah, monsieur, I had the promise of a soldier and the word of a gentleman. I thought I might have depended upon them!"

"Take my arm, madame," said the stranger, "and let us proceed on our way."

The musketeer advanced two steps and pushed D'Artagnan aside with his hand.

D'Artagnan made a spring backward and drew his sword. At the same time and with the rapidity of lightning the unknown drew his.

"In the name of heaven, milord!" cried Mme. Bonacieux, throwing herself

MOTHERHOOD SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that,
 with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invig-orator of the female organism.

In many homes
 once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal,
 healthy and strong.

the first freedom to which I had to reply, I summoned my attendants."

"Yes, yes! That is true, and any other love but mine would have sunk beneath this ordeal, but my love came out from it more ardent and more eternal. What to me were all the treasures in the world or all the kings of the earth? Eight days after I was back again, madame. That time you had nothing to say to me. I had risked my life and my favor to see you but for a second. I did not even touch your hand, and you pardoned me on seeing me so submissive and so repentant."

"Yes, but the king, excited by M. the Cardinal, made a terrible clamor, Mme.
 de Vernet was driven from me, Putange was exiled, Mme. de Chevreuse fell into disgrace, and when you wished to come back as ambassador to France the king himself—remember, milord, the king himself—opposed it."

"Yes, and France is about to pay for her king's refusal with a war. What object, think you, have this expedition to Re and this league with the protestants of Rochelle which I am projecting? The pleasure of seeing you!"

an accent of terror. "I have had pre-sentiments likewise! I have had dreams. I dreamed that I saw you lying bleeding, wounded."

"In the left side, was it not, and with a knife?" interrupted Buckingham.

"Yes; it was so, milord."

"Would God send the same dreams to you as to me if you did not love me? Should we have the same pre-sentiments if our existences were not associated by our hearts? You love me, my beautiful queen, and you will weep for me?"

"Oh," cried Anne of Austria, "this is more than I can bear! In the name of heaven, duke, leave me. Go! I do not know whether I love you or do not love you, but what I know is that I will not be a perjured woman. Depart, go then, I implore you!"

"Oh, how beautiful you are thus!
 Oh, how I love you!" said Buckingham.

"Oh, but go, go, I implore you, and come back hereafter; come back as ambassador, come back as minister, come back surrounded with guards who will defend you, with servants who will watch over you and then—then I shall be no longer in fear for your days and I shall be happy in seeing you."

"Oh, then, some pledge of your indulgence! A ring, a necklace, a charm!"

"You will leave France—you will return to England?"

"I will; I swear to you I will."

"Wait, then, wait."

And Anne of Austria re-entered her apartment and came out again almost immediately, holding a casket in her hand made of rosewood, with her cipher upon it in gold letters.

"Here, milord, here," said she. "Keep this in memory of me."

Buckingham took the casket and fell a second time on his knees.

"You promised me you would go,"
 said the queen.

"And I keep my word. Your hand, madame, your hand, and I depart."

Buckingham applied his lips passionately to that beautiful hand, and then rising said:

"Within six months if I am not dead
 I shall have seen you again, madame;
 even if I have confounded the whole world for that object, I shall have seen you again."

In the corridor he met Mme. Bonacieux, who waited for him and who conducted him out of the Louvre.

The officers who had arrested M.
 Bonacieux conducted him to the Bastille, where he became the object of the grossest insults and the harshest treatment. He was taken before a commissary, a man of very repulsive mien, with a pointed nose, yellow and salient cheek bones, small but keen penetrating eyes.

He began by asking M. Bonacieux his name, prenames, age, condition and abode.

The accused replied that his name was Jacques Michel Bonacieux, that he was fifty-one years old, was a retired mercer and lived in the Rue des Fossoyeurs, No. 14.

The commissary then, instead of continuing to interrogate him, made him a long speech upon the danger there is for an obscure bourgeois to meddle with public matters, especially when they concerned M. Cardinal.

The character of M. Bonacieux was one of profound selfishness, mixed whole truth, for your repentance alone can remove the anger of the cardinal."

"Why, I am ready to tell everything," cried Bonacieux, "at least all that I know. Interrogate me, I entreat you!"

"Where is your wife, in the first place?"

"Why, did not I tell you she had been stolen away from me?"

"Yes, but yesterday at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, thanks to you, she escaped."

"My wife escaped!" cried Bonacieux.
 "It is no fault of mine, I will swear!"

"What business had you, then, to go into the chamber of M. d'Artagnan, your neighbor, with whom you had a long conference, in the course of the day? What was the object of that visit?"

"To beg him to assist me in finding my wife. I believed I had a right to endeavor to recover her. I was deceived, as it appears, and I ask your pardon for doing so."

"And what did M. d'Artagnan reply?"

"M. d'Artagnan promised me his assistance. But I soon found out that he was betraying me."

"You are imposing upon justice. M. d'Artagnan made an agreement with you and in virtue of that agreement put to flight the men of the police who had arrested your wife and has placed her out of reach of all inquiries. Fortunately, M. d'Artagnan is in our hands, and you shall be confronted with him."

"Ah, ma foi! I ask no better!" cried Bonacieux.

"Bring in M. d'Artagnan," said the commissary to the guards. The two guards led in Athos.

"But!" cried Bonacieux, "this is not
 M. d'Artagnan that you have brought before me!"

"Your name?" asked the commissary of the musketeer.

"Athos," replied the musketeer.

"But you said that your name was D'Artagnan."

"My guards said to me, 'You are
 M. d'Artagnan.' I answered, 'You think so, do you?' My guards again exclaimed that they were sure I was."

"But, I tell you, M. le Commissaire," cried Bonacieux, "there is not the least doubt about the matter.
 M. d'Artagnan is my tenant, although he does not pay me my rent, and even better on that account ought I to know him. M. d'Artagnan is a young man, scarcely nineteen, and this gentleman must be thirty at least."

At this moment the door was opened quickly and a messenger, introduced by one of the gatekeepers of the Bastille, gave a letter to the commissary.

"Oh! unhappy woman!" cried the commissary.

"How! what do you say? of whom do you speak? It is not of my wife, I hope!"

"On the contrary, it is of her. Your affair is becoming a pretty one."

"But," said the agitated mercer, "do me the pleasure, monsieur, to tell me how my own proper affair can become the worse by anything my wife does while I am in prison?"

"Because that which she does is part of a plan concerted between you, of an infernal plan!"

Chevreuse was less cruel than you. Holland loved her, and she responded to his love."

"Mme. de Chevreuse was not a queen," murmured Anne of Austria, overcome in spite of herself by the expression of so profound a passion.

"You would love me, then, if you were not one? Thanks for those sweet words."

"Oh, milord, you have ill understood, wrongly interpreted. I did not mean to say—"

"Silence, silence!" cried the duke. "If I am happy in an error do not have the cruelty to deprive me of it. You have told me yourself, madame, that I have been drawn into a snare, and I perhaps shall leave my life in it, for, although it be strange, I have for some time had a presentiment that I shall shortly die." And the duke smiled, with a smile at once sad and charming.

"Oh," cried Anne of Austria, with for an obscure bourgeois to meddle with public matters, especially when they concerned M. Cardinal.

The character of M. Bonacieux was one of profound selfishness, mixed with sordid avarice, the whole seasoned with extreme cowardice. The love with which his young wife had inspired him was a secondary sentiment.

"But, M. le Commissaire," said he timidly, "I beg you to believe that I know and appreciate more than anybody the merit of the incomparable eminence by whom we have the honor to be governed."

"You must nevertheless have committed a crime since you are here and are accused of high treason."

"Of high treason!" cried the terrified Bonacieux. "Of high treason! How is it possible for a poor mercer, who detests all Huguenots and who abhors all Spaniards, to be accused of high treason?"

"M. Bonacieux," said the commissary, looking at the accused as if his little eyes had the faculty of reading to the very depths of hearts; "M. Bonacieux, you have a wife?"

"Yes, monsieur—that is to say, I had one. She has been carried off from me, monsieur."

"She has been carried off?" said the commissary. "And do you know who the man is that has committed this outrage?"

"I think I know him."

"Who is he?"

M. Bonacieux was in the greatest perplexity possible. Had he better deny everything or tell everything? He decided upon telling all.

"I suspect," said he, "a tall, dark man of lofty carriage, who has the air of a great lord. He has followed us several times, as I think, when I have waited for my wife at the wicket of the Louvre to fetch her home."

The commissary appeared to experience a little uneasiness.

"And his name?" said he.

"Oh, as to his name, I know nothing about it, but if I were ever to meet him I should know him in an instant. I will answer for it, even if he were among a thousand persons."

"You have answered that you should recognize him," said the commissary. "That is all very well and enough for today. Before we proceed further some one must be informed that you know the abductor of your wife. Take away the prisoner."

"Where must we place him?" demanded a guard.

"In a dungeon—the first you come to, provided it be a safe one," said the commissary, with an indifference which penetrated poor Bonacieux with horror.

"Alas, alas," said he to himself, "misfortune hangs over me! My wife must have committed some frightful crime. They believe that I am her accomplice and will punish me with her! She must have spoken; she must have confessed everything. A woman is so weak!"

Bonacieux could not close his eyes, not because his dungeon was so very disagreeable, but because his uneasiness was too great to allow him to sleep.

At dawn he heard his bolts drawn and sprang up with a terrified bound, only to face the commissary.

"Your affair has become more complicated since yesterday evening, my good man, and I advise you to tell the

of a plan concerted between you, of an infernal plan!"

"I swear to you, M. le Commissaire, "that you are in the profoundest error, and that if she committed any follies I renounce her, I abjure her, I curse her."

"Reconduct the prisoners to their dungeons," said the commissary, designating, by the same gesture, Athos and Bonacieux, "and let them be guarded more closely than ever."

"And yet," said Athos, with his habitual calmness, "if it be M. d'Artagnan who is concerned in this matter I do not perceive too clearly how I can take his place."

They led back the mercer to the same dungeon in which he had passed the night and left him to himself during the day. Bonacieux wept away the hours. In the evening at the moment he had made his mind up to lie down upon the bed he heard steps in his corridor. These steps drew near to his dungeon, the door was thrown open, and the guards appeared.

"Follow me," said an exempt, who came behind the guards.

"Ah, my God, my God," murmured the poor mercer, "now indeed I am lost." And he followed the guards who came for him mechanically and without resistance.

He was placed in a carriage, which was put in motion as slowly as a funeral car.

They reached Croix du Trahoir, the place where obscure criminals were executed. Bonacieux could not yet see the dreadful cross, but he felt as if it were in some sort coming to meet him. When he was within twenty paces of it he heard a noise of people, and the carriage stopped. This was more than poor Bonacieux could endure, depressed as he was by the successive emotions which he had experienced. He uttered a feeble groan, which might have been taken for the last sigh of a dying man.

CHAPTER X.

The Cardinal's Gold.

THE crowd was not produced by the expectation of a man who was to be hanged, but by the contemplation of a man who was hanged.

The carriage, which had been stopped for a minute, resumed its way, passed through the crowd, threaded the Rue Saint Honore, turned the Rue des Bons Enfants, and stopped before a low door. The door opened, two guards received Bonacieux in their arms; they carried him along an alley, up a flight of stairs and deposited him in an antechamber upon a bench.

At this moment an officer opened a door and came up to the prisoner.

"Is your name Bonacieux?" said he.

"Yes, M. l'Officier," stammered the mercer, more dead than alive, "at your service."

"Come in," said the officer.

My Dear Elsa—I must tell you the very latest word in new thought and education. A neighbor of mine has a most interesting family of three daughters and one son. They are all very bright and clever, but unfortunately the father of this wonderful family is not in a position financially to gratify their ambitious desires. The three daughters are now self supporting, but the son, a boy of fourteen, who has an unusually fine mind, was badly hurt some time ago in an automobile accident. Besides his physical injuries, the mental shock was so great that even after the boy was well on the road to recovery he was not allowed to study for a year.

Under these conditions the patient became very restive and nervous, so much so that, fearing serious results, the doctor called a family conference. The limited funds of the family, with the great strain put upon it by the long, expensive illness, all realized were insufficient to meet the new demands.—The case was finally summed up by the doctor saying: "The boy must be kept interested and amused and not be left to himself. Neither his mind nor his body can be taxed. His eyes must rest. Travel and change would be best. As you can't give him that, you must all lend a hand and devise something right here and right now."

Well, this is what was done. The housework had for several years been shared as the wages of a servant and the living expenses saved went to swell the little fund for education. Even Kite (the boy's nickname at

The paper prevents the garments from slipping and does not add to the weight of the baggage, an important item when overweight luggage is to be dreaded. The secret of successful packing is packing tight and firmly. The inexperienced fears to crush things, so gives them room to slip and slide. Heavier gowns should be packed first, and on no account should skirts be turned inside out for packing. Let them be right side and arrange them flat, but if the top has to be turned over put a roll of soft paper in the fold to avoid creases. An abundance of tissue paper should be used when packing, and layers of it should be placed between the folds of evening gowns as well as in the sleeves of bodices and in the loops of bows. Delicate trimmings should be wrapped round with plenty of paper too.

Umbrellas and sunshades should be placed in a linen case made for the purpose. This kind of hold-all will carry a rug, a wrap, coat or cloak and a cushion, if this is needed.

When packing hats remember to fix them securely with a band of elastic, as this will then save them from shaking about. Vells, ribbons and laces can be packed with the hats. Wire frame fitted hatboxes are admirable for carrying one's most treasured headgear, and as these are made to take six or seven it will be seen that this is as much as the vainest of women need. The Japanese baskets, which are so cheap to buy, make nice hat carriers, but they

THE ANNUAL PROBLEM.

YES, if you must know,

I think I will go

On a vacation this year.

But, oh, dear,

This making up my mind

I find

A wearisome task,

If any one should ask.

I have the price

And advice

To burn.

Everywhere I turn

Is a booklet or sketch

Telling me to fetch

My playthings and come along

And that I can't go wrong.

Say,

But they're all gay

And fine sorts,

These summer resorts!

And the fellows who run the same

Have confidence in their own game.

To read the book

One would think the cook

Was imported from France

And that no chance

Would be run

In picking one

For a season of rest,

For each is the best.

That is how it reads,

But sad experience bleeds

And is mighty sore

When it remembers the days of yore,

For no resort, however fine,

Ever did shine

With luster quite as bright

As those who write

Beg leave to report.

They fall short

By a mile or so

Of the frenzied flow

Summer Worl

The wise woman makes Christmas gifts in the s pickup work which later in useful for presents th

shared as the wages of a servant and the living expenses saved went to swell the little fund for education. Even Kite (the boy's nickname at school) had taken care of his room, sewed on buttons and looked after rips.

After the doctor's consultation the mother had an inspiration which she put into immediate action. Going to the sickroom, she found the boy, whose dull, lifeless face and twitching, restless fingers gave her a sickening pain, though she gave no sign, and said: "Kite, I'm in trouble today. It is my busy baking day. My head hurts, and the work lags. Do you feel well enough to help me out? Could you get downstairs and soothe my nerves with something from Schubert until I get the kitchen ready for cakemaking?"

She told me the radiance that leaped into the boy's face was dazzling, and then he began to sob hysterically and called himself a beast for selfishly thinking only of himself. But he got at the piano with amazing quickness and played delightfully for about twenty minutes. Then he appeared in the kitchen, got out an old cookbook, slid into one of his sisters' cover all aprons and begged to entirely make and bake the cake of his own selection, which he did to perfection.

His task finished, he was helped to his room and couch, a tired, happy child, and he slept a refreshing, restful sleep. This was the beginning, and during his convalescence he became an accomplished cake and biscuit maker. He also learned from a crippled fisherman whom he had often befriended to make tennis and fish nets, for which he found a ready sale among his friends.

Later on he joined a party of school friends at camp in the mountains, where his genius for cooking made him a welcome and useful member. When he returned to his studies he was a reconstructed boy, on a better basis than before the accident, sounder in mind and body and with a reserve force that stood him well in the school years that followed.

This, you say, is an exceptional case of an exceptional boy and an exceptional family. But I really do not think so. And I am sure if this treatment of interdependence could be put into use for nervous, restless boys and girls healthier bodies and brains would result. It seems to me a reasonable and desirable system worthy of general adoption.

Possibly, my dear Elsa, you would like to know the new points I gleaned about packing from a professional packer. The soft gowns of the summer look so easy to pack, but wait, dear, until you begin trying to get a dozen or so in your trunk or, worse still, wait until you get to the end of your journey with them packed in the usual well folded order and see the destruction that will greet your eyes! So take the advice of this packer and roll each frock smoothly over a heavy roll of newspaper that has been covered with a sheet of tissue paper! If the frock is white, blue paper should be used.

It will be seen that this is as much as the vainest of women need. The Japanese baskets, which are so cheap to buy, make nice hat carriers, but they should be lined with holland beforehand and on no account be trusted to the care of the baggage van. Two or three hats can be strapped in these with elastic bands reaching from side to side, and if plenty of tissue paper is stuffed in between the bows and around the brims they will travel quite as well as in a most expensive hatbox.

LAUNDRY HINT.

New Flatirons That Are Convenient For Summer Work.

A number of irons are now on the market for summer use when it is not desirable to have sufficient fire in the range to heat the irons. Some of these are electric irons, gas irons and, most practical of all for the country home, denatured alcohol irons, says the Cornell university reading course in laundry work.

For general laundry purposes one size of the ordinary sadiron is sufficient, but it is advisable to put several irons into a well equipped laundry, to use for the various kinds of work to be done. Among them should be heavy, medium heavy and small pointed irons, the last for ironing ruffles, laces, etc.

A frequent cause of poor ironing is the condition of the irons. They must be kept clean and free from rust to do good work. New irons should be heated thoroughly and rubbed with wax or grease before using. If irons are to be put away for any length of time they should be covered with a thin coating of vaseline, clean grease or paraffin or wrapped in waxed paper. If starch cooks on it should be removed immediately with a dull knife. If irons become dirty from careless use or from being left on the stove during the preparation of the meals they should be thoroughly washed with soap and water and carefully dried. To keep irons smooth while using them rub with wax or paraffin.

For the Farmer Who Thinks.

Harrowing corn after it is planted is looked upon by the Wisconsin experiment station as somewhat hazardous, because the harrow is sure to injure some of the hills.

Not every farmer stops to think that the guards on his mower get smooth and do not cut so well as they might. Take them all out and grind them. The machine will cut about as good as new for a long time after that.

A careful and intelligent use of stable manure will build up the fertility of any farm. The trouble with the average farmer is that he wastes his manure. The habit of regarding manure as valueless is one of the most expensive a farmer can have.

Rotation of crops is one of the simple, practical methods of increasing the productivity of the farm and distributing labor. If you are not already practicing rotation in your farming, now is a good time to work out a systematic cropping scheme for your farm. A practical system of rotation can be worked out for every farm.

SAVE YOUR FENCEPOSTS.

Dip Their Ends in Creosote and They Will Last Twice as Long.

The Missouri experiment station has issued a circular on fenceposts, telling how to prolong their life. It says that wood does not decay for the same reason that iron rusts, but because the tissues of the wood are destroyed by low forms of life called fungi. This rot of the wood produces spores, which may be scattered by the wind and thus spread the decay.

A fencepost will decay most quickly at the surface of the ground, for there the conditions are most favorable for the growth of the fungi. Wood that was kept entirely under water would not decay for lack of air. Bog oak is dug from the swamps in Ireland, where it has lain for centuries, and then made into furniture.

Various methods are suggested for prolonging the life of fenceposts. Piling stones, ashes or gravel about the base will help, and so will setting the post in cement or concrete. It also pays to char the ends of the posts over an open fire, but the charred part

This vegetable is much more largely grown in European countries than in America, and it should receive more general attention here. Seed for the last crop should be sown at the same time as late cabbage.—National Stockman and Farmer.

"DON'TS" FOR COW BUYERS.

Nine Things to Avoid if One Wishes to Build Up a Dairy Herd.

In an article on "Building Up a Dairy Herd," in the Ohio Farmer, William A. Martin says:

A few of the things that we have learned to avoid in buying cows are: First—Don't buy without testing for tuberculosis and watch the veterinary closely when he is doing the testing. See that the tuberculin is fresh, that the seal is unbroken, and then read the thermometer yourself. Second—Don't buy cows that are too old. By the time you find out whether you want them or not they are past their usefulness. Third—Don't buy cows that are not marked typically for the breed you want. Fourth—Don't buy from a herd unless you see plenty of calves or have extra good proof that they have been sold. In this way you may avoid contagious abortion. Fifth

Suffered Agony Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

Hundreds of people gladly testify to the wonderful curative powers of the famous fruit medicine, "Fruit-a-tives". To those now suffering with Indigestion, Dyspepsia or other Stomach Troubles, this letter of Mr. Stirling, the well known real estate operator of Western Ontario, shows the way to a speedy and certain cure.

GLENCOE, ONT., AUG. 15th. 1911 "Fruit-a-tives were so beneficial to me when I suffered with distressing Dyspepsia, that I wish to inform you of their satisfactory results.

Although I have, in past, suffered agony with Dyspepsia, I am now in perfect health. "Fruit-a-tives" accomplished the desired result."

N. C. STIRLING. "Fruit-a-tives" will cure every trace of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach Bloating, Pain After Eating, Biliousness and Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy in the world made of fruit juices and valuable tonics.

ALFALFA "MUSTS."

Things to Observe if Grower Wants to Raise the Best Possible Crop.

These "musts" for the alfalfa grower were prepared by Professor W. H. Olin at the head of the extension department of the University of Idaho:

First.—Use only clean, vital, well acclimated seed.

Second.—Use, for alfalfa, land which has previously been well cultivated and which has good under drainage. Thorough drainage is chief among the requirements for this plant.

Third.—Preparation of seed bed must be thorough and should be on ground plowed in the fall for spring seeding and on spring plowed ground for fall seeding. No field crop pays richer revenues for thorough preparation than alfalfa.

Fourth.—Have your seed bed first well pulverized, then firm, next moist surface soft, devoid of hard lumps and well planked or leveled.

Fifth.—Sow on irrigated land with a drill evenly and at that rate of seeding which will give you a good stand, provided seed and bed are what they should be. Follow drill with a smoothing harrow as soon as possible, cross harrowing the field.

Sixth.—Prevent crusting of surface soil at period of germination and early stage of growth.

Seventh.—Use common sense and good judgment at all times.

Eighth.—An alfalfa renovator is an indispensable tool for cultivating alfalfa in the field.

base will help, and so will setting the post in cement or concrete. It also pays to char the ends of the posts over an open fire, but the charred part should extend at least six inches above the ground. Creosote is a good material for preventing decay. A tank like the one shown in the picture given above can be used for this purpose. The arm of metal pipe is put over a fire, which causes the circulation and raises the temperature of the creosote. When treating, creosote is put into the tank, the fire is built under the arm and the temperature raised just above the boiling point. There ought to be enough of the creosote to cover the lower forty inches of the post. The posts are well seasoned with the bark peeled off. Then they are put down into the tank and kept there about two hours, after which they are ready to set.

This treatment will greatly lengthen the life of a post, and with creosote at 15 to 20 cents a gallon the cost will be 6 to 8 cents for a post and will practically double its life.

Good Investments.

Every dollar spent in buying needed equipment for the farm is an investment that the farmer should be glad to make. It is the duty of every farmer to keep posted upon new implements, and whenever one is found that saves labor and brings returns buy it for the farm.

A Lord's Hobby.

Lord Iveagh has just given a sum of $50,000 to Trinity College, Dublin, to be expended in the department of geology and mineralogy. Seeing that ten years ago he gave $200,000 to his alma mater for scientific purposes he has handsomely discharged his indebtedness to her.

Lord Iveagh has an amiable weakness for giving away thousands of dollars at a time. In 1908 he gave $1,250,000 for the erection of model working-class dwellings in Dublin, and he has handed over large sums for a similar purpose in London. A few years ago the Dublin Corporation presented their munificent patron with an address in recognition of his many acts of generosity to the city.

Lord Iveagh's wealth is derived from the famous Guinness brewery. He keeps a town house in Dublin, and one in London, but his great residence is Elveden, near Thetford. This is perhaps the finest sporting estate in England.

Children's Books In Olden Times.

The earliest books for children were schoolbooks pure and simple. The titles of some of them suggest entertainment and refreshment, but the arid pages belie the promise. For instance, an old Latin grammar, published in 1570, had for sub-title, "A delicious Syrupe newly Clarified for Yonge Scholars yt thurste for the Swete Lycore of Latin Speche," but the "Lycore" is a very turgid, confused flow of pedantry. A different style is suggested by the name of another schoolbook written by one Elisha Coles in 1675, "Nolens Volens, or you shall learn Latin whether you will or no," a title which suggest a vigorous application of the birch.

from a herd unless you see plenty of calves or have extra good proof that they have been sold. In this way you may avoid contagious abortion. Fifth—Don't buy a cow to be in calf unless you can handle a calf in her. Sixth—Don't buy a cow with little scars exactly opposite each other in pairs an inch or so apart in the vulva. These are remnants of stitches. When the cow calved some time in the past she threw out her womb and is likely to do so again. Seventh—Test every cow as to standing, handle her nnder and see for yourself whether she shows any symptoms of kicking. Eighth—Take a look in her mouth. Quite frequently a cow that is nine or ten years old and in good shape will be sold for a five-year-old. Ninth—Because she has plenty of breeding don't expect a wasp waisted, goat ndered beast to break any performance records.

Keep Up Your Account.

Consider the soil as a deposit bank. If you are checking on your deposit you will soon exhaust it unless you put in a little more than you take out. The more you leave there the richer you are. As Poor Richard said, "Always taking out and never putting in, one soon comes to the bottom of his meat tub." Your soil is your meat tub.—Home and Farm.

Birds and Berries.

There are various ways of protecting berries from birds. On small patches fish net or any coarse netting is a good protection. Mosquito netting is not so desirable, as the fruit often does not mature so well under its close mesh. A favorite method in England is to stretch black thread back and forth above the berries. It is said that the birds are afraid of this.—Farm Journal.

Peas For Seed.

It is cheaper to buy seed peas than to waste the exertion of your vines in trying to mature them. Keep them picked as soon as large enough for the table and the usefulness of the vines will be prolonged.

Is your local market well supplied with fresh vegetables? It may pay you to look after this matter. There are splendid opportunities in vegetable gardening near many towns and cities.

The postcard album has taken the place of the photograph album and the button string.

Mr. Alexander McTaggart, B. S. A., one of the special drainage experts employed by the Ontario Department of Agricultural, has arrived in Napanee to make a number of surveys in Lennox and Addington counties. Nearly forty application have already been received. Any farmer wishing to tile drain his land can have a drainage survey made by applying to Mr. McTaggart or Mr. G. B. Curran, at the Agricultural Office, Napanee.

Duck Shooting Season.

There seems to be some misapprehension as to the opening date for duck shooting as the dates for the northern and southern parts are different. In the southern district the season opens on Sept. 15th., and the northern district on Sept. 2nd. The southern district comprises all the Province of Ontario lying south of the main line of the C.P.R. railway and

Try the new spray for potatoes, "Arsenate of Lead." It prevents blight, does not injure the vines, is not easily washed off by the rain, and saves your money. You can get the right kind at Hooper's—Napanee's Largest Drug Store.

BREAK UP THE OLD PASTURES.

This is a bit of advice which farmers in general would do well to follow. Some of our most troublesome pests find their breeding-places in land that has been left for some years under grass. Wire worms and white grubs, which are often-times very destructive to crops of all kinds, increase and multiply in such places where they feed upon the roots of the grass. Wire worms in their adult stage are known as Click Beetles, oblong, dull-colored creatures. White grubs turn into what are commonly called June bugs or May beetles. These worms take from two to three years to grow to maturity and during that long period they feed upon roots and are out of sight and out of reach. There is a popular idea that salt will kill these creatures and the question is often asked, "How much salt should be used per acre?" Like many other popular superstitions, there is nothing whatever in this material for the purpose. Enough salt to affect the grubs would completely prevent the growth of and vegetation and it is doubtful if any amount whatever would kill the insects. Many other substances have been tried but so far without success. The remedy is, therefore, to break up the breeding places. This should be done by ploughing the grass fields deeply late in the fall in order to expose the grubs and their winter quarters to the frost and rain, and also to the various animals and birds which feed upon them. The safest crop to grow during the first year is peas. After that a hoed crop, preferably turnips, would be the safest; after the second year there will probably be no grubs left. During the first year any that there are in the ground would feed upon the sod that had been ploughed under and would let the growing crop pretty well alone. To grow corn, grain, potatoes or mangels at the outset would be very risky indeed. Besides these two insects, old pasture lands, especially where the soil is dry, are productive breeding-places for grasshoppers which spread from these fields to the crops. In the Southern Counties of Ontario bordering on Lake Erie, there is another serious pest which also breeds in old pastures where the soil is light or sandy. This is known as the Rose Chafer. The beetle appears usually in great swarms about the time the roses come in bloom and devours, not only these flowers, but all sorts of others that may be growing in the garden. The worst damage it does is to the blossoms and young fruit of grape vines, of which it is particularly fond. These four serious pests, which are extremely difficult to control, may be greatly reduced in numbers, if not got rid of altogether by a short rotation in crops and especially by keeping pastures not more than three years under grass. C. J. S. Bethune, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.
